New Delhi: Schools might have been shut, but children continued their learning even during the pandemic. Despite the inequalities and digital divide, the 15th Annual Status of Education Report (ASER 2020) Rural reflected the res ilience shown towards learning as 11% of all rural families bought a new phone since the lockdown began and 80% of those were smartphones. Also more children joined government schools than private schools.

Unlike the previous ASER reports which focussed on learning outcomes, the latest report deals with the process of learning because of the prevailing Covid-19 situation. This is the first time the survey has been conducted over telephone.

While the closure of schools since March 2020 impacted campus academic activities, the good news was that 70% of the community came out to help the school support system. The data demonstrated that almost three quarters of all children receive some form of learning support from family members. Notably, even among children whose parents have not studied beyond primary school, family members pro- emerged as the most preferred lings also playing an impor- got materials/activities. tant role in helping the young-

The report called for developing a digital pedagogy and to prioritise efforts to break the digital divide. Just around 56 % households with children enrolled in government schools smartphones, 74.2% of households who send their children to private schools have smartphones Citing another example of the existing divide, the report said children in private schools were much more likely to have accessed online resources than those in government schools For example, 28.7% of children enrolled in private schools had watched videos or other pre-recorded content online, as compared to 18.3% of government school students. Access to learning materials and activities too need attention as only 33.5% of all government school children received materials or activities, as compared to 40.6% children in private schools. In fact, in states like Rajasthan (21.5%), UP(21%), and Bihar(7.7%), less than a quarter of all children had received any materials.

A majority of the roughly two-thirds of all households that reported not having received learning materials during the reference week said they hadn'r received any vided support with older sib- medium via which the children
